LandClosers Blueprint

A Note Before We Start

This book is short on purpose.

I didn't write it to impress you with my vocabulary or pad a page count. I wrote it because I run a 7-figure land flipping operation and I've watched too many smart people waste months chasing complicated real estate strategies when the simplest asset class in the game, vacant land, was sitting right in front of them.

Here's what I know: land is boring. There's no HGTV show about it. Nobody at a dinner party gets excited when you say "I flip vacant lots." But when you show them the wire confirmation for a deal where you bought a lot for $18,000 and sold it 6 weeks later for $55,000, suddenly everyone wants to know more.

My company, Elevate Real Estate Partners, has done this at scale. The students in my LandClosers Blueprint program are doing it right now, some of them are about to close their first deal at $20,000 profit or more.

This book will show you exactly how. By the end, you'll understand the business model, the math, the system, and whether this is something you want to pursue further.

Let's go.

CHAPTER 1

Why Vacant Land? (And Why Almost Nobody Talks About It)

When most people think about real estate investing, they think about houses. Buy a fixer-upper, rehab it, sell it. Or buy a rental property, deal with tenants, collect checks.

Both of those strategies work. They also come with contractors who ghost you, tenants who don't pay, surprise foundation issues, and enough stress to make you question why you got into this at all.

Vacant land has none of that.

Land has no buildings to maintain.

There's no roof to replace. No plumbing to fix. No tenant calling at 11pm about the heat. You own a piece of the earth. It just sits there.

Land sellers are highly motivated.

The people selling vacant land are almost never doing it because the land is appreciating. They're selling because they inherited it, forgot they owned it, are behind on taxes, or just want it gone. Many of them will accept 30-50 cents on the dollar just to be done with it.

You can do this from your laptop.

Every step of the Land Closers system, finding sellers, making offers, signing contracts, finding buyers, closing, happens remotely. You never need to visit the property. The entire business runs from your phone and computer.

The margins are extraordinary.

When you buy land at 30-50% of market value and sell it at or near market value, you're looking at 100-200%+ returns on your purchase price. On a deal where you buy at $18K and sell at $55K, that's a $37,000 profit. On one deal.

> Land investors aren't smarter than everyone else. They just figured out that the boring asset everybody ignores is the one with the best risk-adjusted returns.

Here's what separates land from every other real estate strategy:

Strategy	Headaches	Typical Margin
House Flipping	Contractors, permits, carrying costs	10-20%
Rental Properties	Tenants, maintenance, vacancies	8-12% annually
Land Flipping	None, just math and follow-up	100-300%+ per deal

CHAPTER 2

The Math (This Is Why It Works)

Most people who fail at land investing fail because they don't understand what the numbers are supposed to look like. They send 500 texts, get no deals, and quit. They didn't fail, they just stopped before the math kicked in.

Here's the actual funnel:

18,000

texts sent to motivated land sellers

Those 18,000 texts generate roughly 3,000 responses. That's a 16-17% response rate, extraordinary compared to any other marketing channel.

1,500

qualified conversations (filtered from 3,000 responses)

Of those 1,500 qualified conversations, people who own land, are motivated to sell, and are in a realistic price range, you'll convert roughly 1-2% into actual offers made.

1 Deal

closed per 18,000 texts (at minimum, most do better)

One deal at $20,000-$50,000 profit pays for 6-12 months of campaign costs and returns your entire investment multiple times over.

What that timeline actually looks like:

1. Week 1-2: Build your list and skip trace it
2. Week 3-4: Launch SMS campaigns, manage responses
3. Week 4-6: Make offers on qualified sellers
4. Week 6-8: Contract signed, due diligence begins
5. Week 8-12: List the property, find a buyer, close

90 days from cold start to first wire. That's the realistic target.

> The math doesn't lie. Most people quit at 5,000 texts because they don't have a deal yet. They have no idea they're 75% of the way there.

What does this cost to run?

The honest answer: less than you think. Here's what a typical first campaign looks like:

- List pulling (Land Portal/Land Insights): ~$500-800
- Skip tracing 5,000 records (DirectSkip/LP/LI) ~$200-300
- SmarterContact SMS: ~$500
- Total first month cost: ~$1200-1600

Your first deal at $20,000 profit returns your campaign investment 10x+ over. The math is the point.

CHAPTER 3

Picking Your Market

Not all markets are equal. Send 18,000 texts in the wrong county and you'll get responses, but the deals won't be there. Send the same campaign in the right county and you'll be fielding offers.

The 5 Market Criteria

1. Population growth

You want counties within 2 hours of a growing metro area. Where people are moving, land values appreciate and buyers are active. Sun Belt states, Texas, Florida, the Carolinas, Georgia, Tennessee, Arizona, consistently produce strong deal flow.

2. Median lot price in the $20K-$200K range

Too cheap (under $5K) and your margins evaporate. Too expensive ($500K+) and you need more capital and longer timelines. The sweet spot is $20K-$200K, enough margin to make real money, liquid enough to sell quickly.

3. Active sales volume

Look for 50-100+ vacant land sales in the county in the past 12 months. This confirms there's an active buyer market. No buyers means no exits, no matter how good your deal is.

4. Property taxes not too high

High annual property taxes mean motivated sellers who are underwater on carrying costs. Avoid markets where taxes are so high that buyers balk at acquisition.

5. Not already saturated by land investors

If you're seeing the same mailer from 5 different land investors every month, that county is too competitive. Use Land Portal or Redfin to check how many "lot" listings are sitting unsold. 90+ days on market is a red flag.

> The best market for your first deal isn't the hottest market. It's the one with active buyers, motivated sellers, and enough deal volume that the math can work in your favor.

Multi-County Strategy

Here's something most beginners get wrong: they pick one county and go all in. We run multiple counties simultaneously. Running 3-5 markets means you always have deal flow somewhere.

Start with two counties. Once you have a deal in one, add a third. By month six, you're running a diversified pipeline instead of a coin flip.

CHAPTER 4

Building Your List and Skip Tracing

Every deal starts with a list of land owners. Your job is to find the ones who are most likely to sell, and then get their phone number.

Step 1: Pull Your List in Land Portal or Land Insights

Land Portal and Land Insights are the tools we recommend for pulling targeted land seller lists. Both let you filter county property records down to exactly the sellers you want. For land investing, your basic filter looks like this:

- Property type: Vacant land / Lots
- Owner type: Individual (not LLC or corporation)
- Out-of-state owner (absentee): Yes, they're less emotionally attached
- Years of ownership: 5+ years (longer = more motivated)
- Tax delinquency: Yes (urgency to sell)
- Lot size: Filter based on your target market

A typical filtered list for a single county run is 3,000-8,000 records. Export that as a CSV.

Step 2: Skip Trace Your List

A property record gives you the owner's name and mailing address. Skip tracing appends a cell phone number so you can actually contact them.

Our preferred tools:

- DirectSkip: Best overall quality for land owner data

- LandPortal / Land Insights: Good volume, slightly lower accuracy

You're paying roughly $0.05-0.10 per record for a clean phone number. For a list of 5,000 records, expect $250-500 for skip tracing. Expect about 50-60% of records to return a valid mobile number. That's normal.

> The quality of your skip trace determines the quality of your conversations. Cheap skip tracing = bad numbers = wasted texts = no deals.

CHAPTER 5

The SMS Machine

This is where Land Closers is different from every other land investing approach.

Most land investors send yellow letters or postcards and wait for sellers to call them. That's fine. But at Elevate Real Estate Partners, we send text messages using SmarterContact, an SMS platform built for exactly this use case. The results speak for themselves.

Why SMS Outperforms Direct Mail

- Response rate: SMS gets 15-20%. Mail gets 1-3%.
- Speed: Your first responses come in within hours. Mail takes 2-3 weeks.
- Cost: 10,000 texts costs about $400. 10,000 mailers costs $4,000+.
- Manageability: SMS conversations happen in one inbox.

How the SMS Campaign Works

The Initial Message

Your first text is short, non-salesy, and genuine. Something like:

> Sample Initial Message:
> Hi [First Name], I came across your lot at [Address] in [County]. Would you consider selling? We buy land as-is for cash, close in 30 days.

The Automated Drip

The majority of deals don't come from the first text. They come from the follow-up. SmarterContact lets you build an automated 3-touch sequence:

- Day 3: "Hi [Name], just following up on the lot at [Address]. Still interested in talking?"
- Day 7: "[Name], last follow-up on [Address]. If you ever want a cash offer, happy to help."
- Day 14: Final touch, then moved to retargeting list for future campaigns.

Inbox Management

Once replies start coming in, here's the labeling system we use to keep the inbox organized:

- Offer Made: you've made an offer and are waiting for a response
- Hot Lead: highly motivated, asking for a number fast
- Follow Up: interested but not ready yet
- Not Interested: clearly out, archive it
- Bad Lot: property has a deal-killer (landlocked, wrong zoning)

The macro system in SmarterContact lets you pre-write responses for the 8-10 most common replies. "How does it work?" "What's my lot worth?" "Make me an offer." Each has a pre-written response you can send with 2 taps. At scale, this is what keeps you sane.

CHAPTER 6

Making Offers: The Land Valuation System

This is where most beginners freeze. "How do I know what to offer?"

The answer is a system. Once you know the system, every deal takes the same 15-20 minutes to evaluate.

Step 1: Find the Property

If the seller gives you an address, use Zillow's zoom-in technique to pinpoint the exact parcel. If they only give you a parcel number, use the county's GIS map to locate it. Most counties have a free public GIS tool.

Step 2: Pull Comparable Sales (The 3-Comp Rule)

On Zillow, filter for: Lots/Land + Sold + Last 6 Months. You need at least 3 comparable sales to establish market value. Comparable means:

- Same general area (within 5-10 miles, same county)
- Similar size (within 20-30% of your subject property)
- MLS-verified sales only (look for the MLS logo + realtor names)
- Exclude: bulk purchases, family transfers, foreclosure sales

Three solid comps give you a reliable market value. Average the three and that's your baseline.

Step 3: Adjust for Features

Not all lots are equal. Here's how to adjust:

Value Increases	Value Decreases
Water access: +$50K-$100K+	Landlocked (no road access): -50% or worthless
Ocean/lake view: +$20K-$50K	Flood zone: -$10K-$30K
Utilities on-site: +$10K-$20K	Steep slope/wetlands: -$10K-$20K
Paved road frontage: +$5K-$15K	Unbuildable zoning: -80% or worthless

Step 4: Apply the Offer Formula

Once you have adjusted market value, apply the scaled offer formula:

- Under $100K market value: Offer 50% of market value
- $100K-$300K market value: Offer 50-60% of market value
- $300K-$700K+ market value: Offer 70-75% of market value

Why does the percentage increase at higher values? Because a 50% offer on a $500K lot is a $250K lowball that kills the conversation. At higher values, you preserve dialogue while still protecting your spread.

> The goal isn't to make the lowest offer. The goal is to make enough offers that some get accepted while keeping your margins intact.

The Free Market Intelligence Hack

Before you make an offer, call the listing realtor on any recently sold comparable lot. Say: "Hi, I saw you sold a lot on [Street] for $X last month. I'm looking at buying one nearby. Was there anything special about that lot that drove the price?"

Realtors love talking about their sales. In 5 minutes you'll know if the comp was an outlier, what features matter in that market, and whether prices are trending up or down. This is free intelligence that most investors never bother to get.

CHAPTER 7

Contracts, Due Diligence, and Closing

You got a "yes" from a seller. Now what?

This is where a lot of beginners panic. They don't know what contract to use, they don't know what to check, and they're afraid of making a mistake. The good news: this part is far more straightforward than it sounds.

Which Contract to Use

Purchase Agreement

You're buying the property yourself and reselling it later. Best for deals where you have the capital to close and want to maximize your sale price and flexibility.

Assignment Contract

You lock up the deal under contract, then sell your contract rights to an end buyer before closing. You never actually own the land. This is the most capital-efficient approach and how most beginners start.

Double Closing

You close on the purchase and the sale in the same day, using the buyer's funds to purchase. Works when buyers won't accept an assignment structure.

For your first deals: use an assignment contract. It requires the least capital and lets you move quickly.

The 60-Day Rule

Always request at least 60 days in your contract with an automatic 30-day extension clause. You need time for due diligence, finding a buyer, and closing. Sellers often push back on the timeline. Hold firm. Anyone serious about selling will wait 60 days for a cash buyer.

Due Diligence: The 6 Essential Checks

Due diligence is what separates professionals from people who get burned. Run these 6 checks on every deal before you commit:

- Zoning: Is the land buildable for the intended use? Call the county planning department.
- Access: Is there road access? A landlocked lot is worth a fraction of its paper value.
- Utilities: Water, sewer, electric, are they on-site, nearby, or nonexistent?
- Environmental: Any known contamination, wetlands, or flood zone designations?
- Title: Any liens, encumbrances, or ownership disputes on the title?
- Perc Test: If the lot needs a septic system, can the soil support one?

Most of this information is publicly available. A title company will catch most title issues when you initiate closing. Your due diligence period (typically 2-4 weeks) gives you time to confirm the lot is what the seller says it is.

Working with Title Companies

Title companies handle the closing. You don't need to be there in person. Ever. You send them the signed contract, they open escrow, do a title search, prepare closing documents, coordinate signatures via DocuSign, and wire funds.

Your job is to email the title company: "Hi, I have a property under contract and I'm ready to open escrow." They take it from there.

> One deal in ten that you put under contract will fall apart. That's why you keep your pipeline full. One failed deal doesn't hurt you when you have three more in progress.

CHAPTER 8

Finding Your Buyer and Getting Paid

This is the step most people worry about the least and should worry about the most. Having a great deal means nothing if you don't have a buyer.

Here's the rule we operate by at Elevate: start building your buyer list before you have a deal.

The 3 Buyer Channels

Channel 1: Facebook Land Groups (Best for Speed)

There are thousands of Facebook groups dedicated to buying and selling land. Search "[State] land for sale" or "vacant land investors [County]." Join the groups for every market you're targeting.

When you have a deal, post: property description, photos (use Google Maps satellite view), comps showing market value, your asking price, and the deadline. Motivated buyers respond within hours. This is how beginners close their first deals in 24-72 hours.

Channel 2: Zillow Realtor Scraping (Best for Relationships)

Filter Zillow for recently sold land in your target county. Find the realtors whose names appear most often on those sold listings. Call each one and say:

"Hi, I'm a land investor in [County]. I buy lots at a discount and resell them. I'm looking for realtors who work with land buyers and would want first look at my deals. Is that something you'd be interested in?"

Most will say yes. You've just built a referral relationship with someone who has an active buyer database. That's worth more than any Facebook post.

Channel 3: Builder Outreach (Best for Margins)

Builders are the premium buyer channel. They pay cash, close fast, and buy repeatedly. A single builder relationship can generate $100,000+ in annual assignment fees.

How to find them: use Zillow's new construction filter to find recent build-outs in your market. Check county building permit records for active permits. Find the builder's personal contact via LinkedIn, county business filings, or Google.

Your pitch: "I wholesale buildable lots in [County] at below-market pricing with pre-vetted titles and fast closes. I'm looking to become a reliable lot source for builders who are actively building in the area."

Close one deal with a builder, deliver what you promised, and you'll be on their speed dial.

The Multi-Channel Strategy

Don't rely on one channel. Build all three simultaneously:

- Start with Facebook for your first 1-3 deals, fastest and most forgiving
- Build realtor relationships in parallel, they generate consistent deal flow
- Layer in builder outreach as you understand your market, premium exits

With multiple channels active, you'll always have an exit for every deal you lock up.

What Happens Next

You've seen the system. The math works. The mechanics are learnable. The question is whether you're going to act on it or file this book away with the other things you meant to do.

Let me be direct with you.

The students in my LandClosers Blueprint program who are about to close $20,000+ deals on their first transaction didn't have any special advantages. They weren't real estate professionals. They didn't have big starting capital. They had a system, a community, and someone to call when they got stuck.

That's what the LandClosers Blueprint provides:

- The complete system, step by step, from pulling your first list to closing your first deal

- Done-with-you coaching calls to review your deals, campaigns, and offers
- Templates for everything: SMS scripts, offer letters, due diligence checklists, title company emails
- A private community of active land investors sharing deals, wins, and market intelligence
- Direct access to the ERE Partners team, people who are doing this at 7 figures right now

The LandClosers Blueprint is not for everyone. It's for people who are serious about building real income from land. If that's you, I'd like to talk.

> The best time to start was a year ago. The second best time is now.
